

Transforms Overview

Transforms help to determine the transformations and mappings necessary for a Jedox Integrator process. They convert data from one or more input sources (extracts or transforms) into a new target. A transform itself can be used as a source for further transforms. For example, several transforms can be built as a series and executed one after the other, so that complex data conversion can be modeled. Transform names must be unique and different from the extract names.
